

A Message From Saebo's Co-Founder, Henry Hoffman

My grandmother, Sarah Eileen Booth, dedicated her life to helping others.

Her spirit - as well as the acronym of her full name - is the heart and soul of Saebo. At Saebo, we pride ourselves on providing affordable, easily accessible, and cutting-edge solutions to people suffering from impaired mobility and function.

From the beginning, we wanted to be known as the trusted clinical source for empowering individuals and rehabilitating lives. Nothing gives our team a greater sense of joy than seeing the feeling of hope and possibility on a patient's face when she uses her hand or arm for the first time in years as a result of one of our products. It's powerful knowing you've helped to create a product that allowed someone else to realize that dream. The feeling of encouraging a caregiver during difficult times or contributing to the overall quality of life of a client is indescribable.

We are committed to helping others and creating products that are not only unique and based on the most recent evidence, but also easily-accessible and affordable for clients to use at home. We know first-hand that strong, rehabilitative progress must take place at home for long-term, life-changing success.

Saebo is growing, and, with that, so is our commitment, dedication, and drive to create products with the power to transform lives. I know if my grandmother knew the extent and possibility of Saebo's reach, she would be proud to know we have helped and will continue to help thousands of people worldwide.

Sincerely,

Henry Hoffman
